SUBJECT: 2010 Review of CPSC Lead Related Recalls

Childhood Lead Poisoning is the most common pediatric public health problem, yet it is entirely preventable. Once a child has been poisoned, the impairment it may cause is irreversible. Lead harms children's nervous systems and is associated with reduced IQ, behavioral problems, and learning disabilities. In large doses, it can cause coma, convulsions and death. While lead paint in homes built before 1978 continues to be the most common source of lead exposure, children may also be exposed to lead from toys that have been manufactured in other countries, antique toys, and collectibles that have been passed down from generation to generation.

There are two ways in which lead can be used in manufacturing toys; in the paint and/or in the plastic. While lead paint was banned in the United States for use in house paint, on items marketed to children, and cookware in 1978, it is still widely used in other countries and therefore can be found on products and toys that are imported into the country. Lead paint may also be found on older toys made in the United States before 1978. The use of lead in plastics has not been banned. Lead is added to plastic to stabilize the plastic molecules from heat. This increases both the durability and flexibility of the plastic. A dust forms when the chemical bond between lead and plastic breaks down from sunlight, air, and detergents.

Please take the time to review and distribute the attached list of products and toys that the CPSC recalled for lead in 2010. Keep in mind that careful toy selection and proper supervision of children is still– and always will be– the best way to protect children from unintentional injuries and poisonings. If you have any questions please contact the Lead Poisoning Prevention and Control Program at 860-509-7299.

Environmental Health Section, Lead Poisoning Prevention and Control Program

The Lead Poisoning Prevention and Control Program (LPPCP) operates in concert with the Environmental Practitioner Licensure Unit in the Department of Public Health (DPH). The major goal is to eliminate confirmed elevated blood lead levels ($\geq 10\mu\text{g}/\text{dL}$) in children less than 6 years of age in Connecticut by the year 2010. The underlying objective is to protect the health and safety of the people of Connecticut and to prevent lead poisoning and promote wellness through education and a wide range of lead poisoning prevention activities. These activities include:

- (1) monitoring environmental lead related health hazards,
- (2) regulating lead hazard identification, abatement and remediation contractors and activities, and the practitioners who provide lead consultant and lead abatement services,
- (3) providing testing and monitoring support in concert with the state laboratory,
- (4) collecting and analyzing environmental health data related to lead exposure,
- (5) developing lead poisoning prevention policies, laws, regulations and strategies,
- (6) maintaining a statewide lead surveillance data system,
- (7) providing case management, investigation oversight, and associated services for children ages 6 months through 6 years (in support of local health departments), and
- (8) providing community and professional outreach and educational services.
